

HOW TO COLD APPROACH WOMEN

A simple system for approaching women, starting conversations, and building real confidence

Before You Start

There is nothing complicated about cold approaching.

You see a girl you find attractive.

You want to talk to her.

So you go talk to her.

The problem is that your brain will do everything it can to stop you.

You'll think:

What should I say?

Is this a good time?

What if she rejects me?

What if people watch me?

Maybe I'll approach her later.

And then she walks away.

You didn't get rejected.

You rejected yourself before you even gave her the chance to respond.

This book is designed to fix that.

You don't need hundreds of pickup lines. You don't need some crazy personality. You don't need to become an "alpha."

You need a simple framework that you can actually remember when you're nervous.

For your first 100 cold approaches, use this exact framework.

Don't keep changing your opener.

Don't memorize ten different setups.

The more options you have in your head, the more likely you are to choke when the moment actually comes.

Your job is to make approaching simple enough that you don't have to think.

See her.

Walk over.

Start.

Talk.

Move it forward.

That's it.

1. KILL THE FEAR BEFORE YOU APPROACH

The hardest part of cold approaching is usually not the conversation.

It's the ten seconds before it.

You see a girl you like.

Your brain immediately starts negotiating with you.

"Maybe she's busy."

"Maybe she's not interested."

"I'll do it after she finishes whatever she's doing."

"What if she says no?"

The longer you stand there, the worse it gets.

So here's your first rule:

See Her → Walk towards her.

The second you see a cute girl you genuinely want to approach, start walking.

Don't stand there staring at her.

Don't rehearse the conversation ten times in your head.

Don't wait until you feel confident.

Walk first. Think later.

Your brain is very good at protecting you from uncomfortable situations.

If you give it enough time, it will always find a reason not to approach.

So don't give it the time.

Command your legs to move.

That's the first skill you're training.

Not getting her number.

Not making her like you.

Taking action despite the nerves.

And that's why we're using the same framework for your first 100 approaches.

You don't need to be creative.

You need reps.

2. THE COLD APPROACH FRAMEWORK

Here is the entire framework.

See → Walk → Get her attention → Open → Pause → Compliment → Read her reaction → Talk → Move forward → Leave.

That's it.

Let's break it down.

STEP 1: SEE HER. WALK.

You see a girl you're attracted to.

Start walking toward her.

Don't give yourself time to think.

The more time you spend thinking, the more excuses your brain will create.

You don't need to feel confident before you walk over.

Walking over is how you build confidence.

STEP 2: GET HER ATTENTION

Once you're close enough, get her attention.

Wave your hand.

Smile.

Make sure she knows you're talking to her.

One important thing: make sure she can actually hear you.

If she's wearing headphones, simply gesture for her to take them out.

Don't sneak up behind her and start talking when she can't hear you.

Basic social awareness matters.

If you're just starting out, approaching a girl who's alone is usually easier.

You can approach girls who are with friends later.

For now, don't make your first hundred approaches harder than they need to be.

3. THE OPENER

Once you have her attention, look at her and say:

"Where did you get that?"

Say it with genuine curiosity.

Not like you're reading a line.

Your expression, your eye contact, your tone and your body language should all communicate the same thing:

You're genuinely curious.

She'll probably say:

"What?"

Perfect.

Now don't rush to explain yourself.

Pause.

Keep eye contact.

Smile.

Let the silence sit for a few seconds.

This is one of the most important parts of the setup.

You're not supposed to panic because she said "what?"

That's the point.

She's curious.

She wants to know what you're talking about.

So let her wonder.

For those few seconds, she's investing her attention in you.

Then smile or smirk and give her the answer.

"That pretty smile."

Or:

"Those pretty eyes."

Or:

"That amazing fashion sense."

That's the reveal.

You started with curiosity instead of immediately throwing a compliment at her.

If you walk up and say:

"You're really pretty."

She can simply say:

"Thank you."

And walk away.

Now the interaction is over.

You can't negotiate a girl into liking you.

That's not how attraction works.

With this setup, you're giving her something unexpected.

You ask a question.

She wants to know the answer.

You make her wait.

Then you give her an unexpected, flirty answer.

That's what makes the interaction playful.

4. DELIVERY MATTERS

You can say the perfect words and still make the approach feel terrible.

Because communication isn't only the words.

It's how you say them.

Your tone.

Your eye contact.

Your facial expression.

Your posture.

Your energy.

Your pace.

If you say:

"Those pretty eyes."

while staring at the floor and mumbling, the words don't matter.

Say it slowly.

Look at her.

Smile.

Be comfortable with the silence.

Don't act like you're asking for permission to be attracted to her.

This is why you should practice.

Stand in front of a mirror.

Say the opener.

Say:

"Those pretty eyes."

Look at yourself while you're saying it.

Check your expression.

Check your posture.

Check your eye contact.

Do it on the clock.

Practice until saying it doesn't feel like some huge event.

You don't practice so you can become a robot.

You practice so that when you're nervous, the basics still come naturally.

5. READ THE REACTION

After the compliment, stop trying to control the outcome.

Watch her reaction.

If she smiles, stays there and continues talking, that's your green light to continue the conversation.

If she clearly isn't receptive, don't try to force the interaction.

You don't need another line.

You don't need to convince her.

You don't need to turn a "no" into a "yes."

Just leave.

That's it.

Confidence isn't only being able to walk up.

Confidence is also being able to walk away.

6. NOW JUST TALK TO HER

This is where beginners overcomplicate everything.

They think:

"What do I say next?"

"What's the perfect question?"

"How do I keep her interested?"

Relax.

You don't need extraordinary communication skills.

You just need to have a normal conversation.

Introduce yourself.

Ask her name.

Shake hands.

Ask where she's from.

Ask what she does.

Ask what she's doing there.

Then actually listen to what she says.

You can also make assumptions and have some fun with her.

For example:

"Tujhe dekh ke lagta hai ki tu Himachal ki hai."

She might laugh and say:

"What? No."

Then ask:

"Where are you from?"

She Might Say Punjab

Then you can tease her:

"Accha, Punjab? Meri mummy ne toh bola tha ki Punjab ki ladkiyan red flag hoti hain."

The point isn't the exact sentence.

The point is to stop treating the conversation like an interview.

Ask.

Listen.

React.

Tease.

Have fun.

Build rapport.

Have banter.

You don't need a new pickup line every thirty seconds.

7. DON'T TRY TO BECOME HER FRIEND

There's an important difference between being friendly and hiding your intentions.

You approached her because you found her attractive.

Don't suddenly pretend you're only interested in making a new female friend.

You don't need to say:

"Hey, I just wanted to make a friend."

She knows why you're talking to her. She knows you like her

Be Man enough to accept it

Your interest can be communicated naturally through your energy, eye contact, flirting and the fact that you approached her in the first place.

You don't need to hide attraction.

You also don't need to make the interaction sexual.

Romantic intent doesn't mean being sexual.

It simply means you're talking to her as a woman you're attracted to, not pretending you're interviewing her for a friendship.

8. MOVE THE INTERACTION FORWARD

If the conversation is going well, don't talk forever.

You don't need to stand there for twenty minutes trying to prove that you're interesting.

After a few minutes, you can say:

"Yeah, I'm actually late for something, I have to run, but I'd like to get to know you more. Maybe over coffee or ice cream."

Then hand her your phone.

Don't make it look like a big thing.

You don't need to nervously ask:

"Can I please have your Instagram?"

Just make your intention clear and hand her your phone. She Knows whats going on

If she gives it to you, great.

If she doesn't, that's fine too.

Then leave.

9. REJECTION

At some point, someone will reject you.

Good.

That's part of the game.

And it doesn't mean something is wrong with you.

There are billions of women in the world.

Even if you lived for another 60 years, that's 20,000 days and dated a new girl every single day, you'd still not even touch 0.01% of the female population

You're never going to meet every girl in your city.

You're never going to meet every girl you'll find attractive.

You're certainly not going to meet every woman in the world.

So why give one rejection so much power?

You approached.

You took the risk.

You found out.

Move on.

If she isn't interested, respect it and leave.

No arguing.

No convincing.

No trying five more lines to change her mind.

You cannot negotiate someone into liking you.

And that's okay.

10. WHAT IF SHE DOESN'T RESPOND AFTER GIVING YOU HER INSTAGRAM?

Who cares?

You can't control what she does.

You can only control what you do.

You approached her.

You started the conversation.

You got her Instagram.

That's a win.

Whether she replies afterward is outside your control.

Don't sit there refreshing your phone and turning it into a story about yourself.

Your job was to take the shot.

You took it.

Move on with your life.

11. YOUR FIRST 100 APPROACHES

Everything you've read so far is theory.

And theory means jack shit if you don't actually go outside and do it.

You can read this entire book five times.

You can memorize every sentence.

You can understand exactly why the framework works.

None of that matters if you still stand across the street watching a girl walk away because you're too scared to approach.

So here's your challenge:

Your first 100 approaches use this exact framework.

Don't change your opener every day.

Don't spend three hours watching dating videos before going outside.

Don't wait until you feel ready.

Use the same setup.

Practice it in the mirror.

Then go do it.

Your goal isn't to get 100 numbers.

Your goal isn't to get 100 dates.

Your goal isn't to make every girl like you.

Your goal is 100 approaches.

Every time you see a girl you're genuinely attracted to and you have the opportunity to approach, take action.

You'll probably be nervous at first.

That's normal.

You'll probably fumble some words.

That's normal.

Some approaches will go nowhere.

That's normal.

Some will turn into great conversations.

Some might turn into dates.

You don't control that part.

What you control is whether you walk over.

And that's the skill we're building.

Stop thinking.

Start walking.